

How do I get access to an article?

also available as video tutorial

A) Full text included in database

1. In some databases, e.g. WISO and partly in EBSCO databases, the full text is directly included and can usually be retrieved as PDF or HTML document.

Abstract
 Abundant research supports a cognitive foundation to teamwork. Team cognition describes the mental states that enable team members to anticipate and to coordinate. Having been examined in hundreds of studies conducted in board rooms, cockpits, nuclear power plants, and locker rooms, we review a few key items in the literature of practitioners' leader-athlete relationships in team cognition.

Keywords
 team cognition, team composition attributes, team boundary attributes, team performance, meta-analysis

B) No full text directly included, but SFX available

In many databases, only the reference to articles is included, but the full text is not.

1. If you search a database that does not include free full texts, you will usually find detailed information about the author of the article, the title, which journal published it, the year and the corresponding page(s).

Example:

Journal of Applied Journalism and Media Studies

N Melodramatic animation, presence and sympathy for crime victims in news: An experiment with adolescents in Hong Kong

2. At first, check to see if the article is accessible in print or in electronic form through the university library.

This is done by searching the catalog for the title of the journal or the ISSN of the journal (but not the title of the article):

- If the university library owns this journal in printed or electronic form, you will find information in the catalog where to find the journal in the library (shelfmark) or a link to the full text (some electronic journals might only be accessible in the university network). Otherwise you won't get a hit in the Ansbach catalog:

Search Entries

- Did you enter your search terms in the right search field?
- Did you truncate your search terms? Using the truncation symbol "*" you can replace any number of characters with the truncation symbol "?" you can replac
- Check your search terms and their spelling.

- If the journal is not available in Ansbach, as in our example, switch to the "Bavarian Library Union" tab.

If too many hits are displayed there, you can switch back to the search mask and restrict the search there to "newspapers and journals" below the search fields. When searching, it can also be helpful to enter the title in quotation marks, i.e. „Journal of Applied Journalism & Media Studies“ in our example – by entering the title in quotation marks, the search will look for exactly this sequence of words and thus reduce the number of hits.

- Now enter the publishing year of the article (this information is contained in the database or can be taken from the bibliographic data). The additional specification of the volume is not necessary.

The screenshot shows a form titled "year of publication and/or volume". A red banner above the form states "Both fields must be entered in numerical form." There are two dropdown menus: "Year:" with the value "2021" and "Volume:". Below the form are two buttons: "New entry" and "Forward".

- Now you can see the order form.
 - Specify the location where you would like to pick up the item: Ansbach University Library or Ansbach State Library.

The screenshot shows the "Delivery details" section of an order form. It includes the following text: "Delivery: the mode of delivery depends on licenses and copyright." Below this is a red heading "Pick up point (Mandatory field):" followed by a dropdown menu showing "00/0 Hochschulbibliothek Ansbach". Underneath is another red heading "Latest date of delivery:" followed by a text input field containing "TT.MM.JJJJ". At the bottom, a red note states: "The deadline must be at least 14 days in the future. However, putting down a deadline will not result in a faster delivery."

- The information about the magazine has already been taken over, you still need to complete the missing information about the article. Mandatory fields: Title or author of the article, page numbers of the article (you have also found this information in the database/it is included in the bibliographic data).
- Confirm that the copies were used only for non-commercial purposes. Click on "Send interlibrary loan request" to finalize.
